

BUILDING DISTANCES

The University of Michigan campus is divided into three sections: North Campus, Central Campus and South Campus. The School of Art & Architecture, School of Music and School of Engineering are some of the programs located on North Campus. Central Campus is home to the undergraduate and graduate library, as well as many other historic buildings. Most undergraduate Residence Halls are located on the Central Campus/Hill Area. The South Campus is commonly known as the athletic campus. Michigan Stadium, Crisler Arena and Yost Ice Arena are a few of the buildings that you will find there.

Getting acquainted with a big, new campus is a challenging task. The chart below is meant to give you an idea of the distance from one building to the next to help plan your departure times. It should also give you an idea of where your classes are located to help you plan where you may want to live. UM buses run between the campuses making it possible for you to live on North Campus even though your classes are located on Central Campus. Since the measurements are recorded in driving distances, estimated walking times are also provided. For more information, please visit <http://giswork2.cscar.umich.edu/website/umich>.
